1 such dispute involved Plaintiff United States of America (the "United 2 States") and Defendant Goodrich Corporation ("Goodrich"). The dispute
3 involved Goodrich's request for production of documents and privilege 4 logs from the United States. (Id.). At the hearing, the Special Master 5 set a production schedule for the United States as a resolution of the 6 dispute before her. Neither party requested that the Special Master 7 memorialize her ruling in a written order.

9 The Special Master set a detailed schedule for the United States.
10 (Id. at 5). The schedule required the United States to produce 11 documents on a rolling basis in batches of 25,000 documents every week, 12 with corresponding privilege logs to follow within ten days of each 13 production. (Id.).

15 On March 22, 2011, the United States filed a motion for 16 reconsideration with the Special Master, seeking reconsideration of the 17 schedule. (Id. at 6). In its motion, the United States requested 18 clarification concerning the number and type of documents required to 19 be produced at each stage of the process. (Id.). The Special Master, 20 in a written report, granted the motion for reconsideration in part, and 21 explained that "the total number of documents for each production should 22 be the sum of all documents actually produced, all documents listed on 23 the corresponding privilege log, and all documents processed, reviewed 24 and found to be non-responsive to any request." (Id. at 7).

1 On April 11, 2011, the United States filed the instant motion with 2 this Court for review of the Special Master's order granting the motion
3 for reconsideration in part. (Dkt. No. 646, Plaintiff United States' 4 Motion For De Novo Review ("Motion for Review") at 1-2). In the Motion 5 for Review, the United States objects to the Special Master's order on 6 three grounds:

8 (1) The Order erroneously compelled the production of 9 documents because there was no motion to compel production
10 before the Special Master;

11 12 (2) The Special Master's Order ignores the terms of the 13 Court's Case Management Order; and 14

15 (3) The schedule is unduly burdensome.

16
17 (Id. at 2).
18

19 At the Court's May 31, 2011 hearing on the Motion for Review, 20 counsel for the United States clarified this objection to the Special 21 Master's order, arguing that the order compelled the United States to 22 produce a privilege log that it was specifically not required to produce 23 under the terms of the operative Case Management Order ("CMO").<sup>2</sup> The

25 <sup>2</sup> The case at bar is governed by the CMO entered on February 15, 26 2011. (Dkt. No. 601). Among other things, the CMO's provisions were 27 intended to refine the scope of discovery in the current case because of 28 its particularly complex nature. The provisions of the CMO relevant to this Order include paragraphs 6(d) through 6(j), discussed in more detail in Part II(B), infra.

1 United States also contended that, because the Special Master did not 2 provide the United States the opportunity to object on that ground, 3 failure to produce either documents or the log according to the schedule
4 would unfairly expose the United States to sanctions.

6 The United States seeks an order vacating the Special Master's 7 order on the grounds that the order exceeds the Special Master's 8 authority and that the order conflicts with the CMO. The United States 9 also seeks relief from the Special Master's schedule for production of 10 documents and logs on the ground that the schedule is unduly burdensome.
11 The Court has conducted a de novo review of the Special Master's ruling.
12 For the reasons set forth below, the Motion for Review is DENIED.

13 14 II.

15 DISCUSSION

16 17 A. The Special Master Had Authority To Issue The Scheduling Order

18
19 The United States' first contention is that the Special Master 20 exceeded the scope of her authority by entering an order which required 21 the United States to produce documents and privilege logs according to 22 a particular schedule. (See Motion for Review at 7, 9). The Court 23 disagrees with this contention. The Special Master did not exceed her 24 authority because the Special Master enjoys the same authority as the 25 Court itself to set limitations on or alter the sequence of discovery, 26 as established by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and this Court's 27 Order delegating that authority to the Special Master. Furthermore, a 28 schedule for production of documents and issuance of privilege logs was

1 a reasonable resolution to the discovery dispute placed before the 2 Special Master by the parties.

4 Rule 26 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allows the Court 5 flexibility in controlling discovery, including provisions that allow 6 the Court to change limitations on discovery as well as the sequence of 7 discovery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); 26(d)(2). The authority to 8 manage discovery in the present case has been delegated to the Special 9 Master under the Order Re-Designating (Dkt. 278), and the terms of the 10 CMO. (CMO at 7, ¶ 7). Under this authority, the Special Master may 11 properly issue orders requiring the production of documents and the 12 issuance of privilege logs on a particular schedule.

13
14 Moreover, Rule 53 allows the Special Master to perform all duties 15 consented to by the parties. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A). Here, the 16 parties squarely placed the issue of scheduling before the Special 17 Master. First, Goodrich moved to compel the production of a privilege 18 log, claiming that one was due immediately, while the United States 19 argued that the log should be due ten days after document production was 20 completed in its entirety. (Motion for Review at 11). This motion 21 required the Special Master to determine exactly when the United States 22 would be required to produce a privilege log. Her scheduling order was 23 thus a reasonable resolution to the discovery dispute before her.

24
25 Second, the United States also requested that the Special Master 26 delay depositions until the document production phase of discovery was 27 complete. (Id. at 8-9). In fact, the United States admits in the 28 Motion for Review that in doing so, the United States requested the 1 Special Master's assistance in setting a phased schedule of production

2 in order to prevent the burden of reopened depositions. (Id.).
3 Therefore, the United States itself placed the issue of timing with 4 respect to the production of documents before the Special Master, and 5 the issue was entirely within her authority to resolve. (See id.); (see 6 also Report of Special Master at 5) ("Mr. MacAyeal [counsel for the 7 United States], on behalf of the United States acknowledged the Special 8 Master's authority to set this schedule."). The Court, therefore, 9 rejects the United States' argument that the Special Master exceeded her 10 authority when she set a schedule for the production of documents and 11 privilege logs.

12
13 B. The Special Master's Order Does Not Conflict With The CMO
14

15 The United States further argues that the Special Master's order 16 ignored the CMO's provisions because the order required the United 17 States to produce a privilege log identifying documents that the CMO 18 specifically exempted from the logging requirement. However, the two 19 orders, read in conjunction, do not conflict. The Court therefore does 20 not interpret the Special Master's order as requiring the United States 21 to log privileged documents exempted by the CMO.

22
23 The relevant provisions of the CMO are as follows:
24

26

27 [. . .]
28

1 d. The parties are not required to include or identify in 2 their privilege logs otherwise responsive documents generated
3 on or after April 1, 2002 that contain attorney-client 4 communications generated by or addressed to counsel for the 5 responding party in connection with the prosecution or 6 defense of the Consolidated Actions . . .

8 e. The parties are not required to include or identify in 9 their privilege logs otherwise responsive documents subject 10 to a common interest, joint defense protection or joint 11 prosecution protection generated on or after April 1, 2002, 12 that contain attorney-client communications in connection 13 with the defense or prosecution of this litigation [or] the 14 Consolidated Actions . . .

15
16 [. . .]

17 18 g. The parties are not required to include or identify in 19 their privilege logs otherwise responsive documents generated
20 on or after April 1, 2002, that contain attorney work product
21 generated at the direction of counsel for the responding 22 party in connection with the prosecution or defense of this 23 action [or] the Consolidated Actions . . .

24
25 h. The parties are not required to include or identify in 26 their privilege logs otherwise responsive documents generated
27 on or after April 1, 2002, that contain attorney work product
28 subject to a common interest privilege, joint prosecution

1 protection or joint defense protection in connection with the 2 prosecution or defense of this action [or] the Consolidated
3 Actions . . .

5 [. . .]

7 j. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Order, if in 8 response to a request for the production of documents covered 9 by Paragraph 6.a. through 6.i., above, responsive documents 10 are not produced on the ground that they are protected by the 11 attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product 12 doctrine, the responding party shall so state in its response 13 to the request for production of documents and shall identify 14 the grounds upon which such documents have been withheld. If 15 the requesting party inquires further regarding the withheld 16 documents, the responding party shall provide the requesting 17 party with the information (e.g., the general nature of the 18 withheld documents (emails, letters, internal memoranda), the 19 time range of the documents, the identity of any non-party 20 recipients, and the number of documents withheld) which is 21 reasonably necessary to allow the requesting party to 22 determine whether to file a motion to compel production of 23 the privilege log described in Paragraph 7 [i.e., with the 24 Special Master].

25
26 (CMO at 4-7). In sum, the CMO exempts the parties from providing 27 privilege logs with respect to certain types of privileged documents 28 postdating April 1, 2002. It further requires that if the parties

1 desire logs for such documents, they must make a formal request. (See 2 CMO at 6-7, ¶ 6(j)). At the May 31, 2011 hearing, counsel for both 3 parties described this mechanism as a system for limiting the scope of 4 discovery in order to eliminate document production they deemed at the 5 outset to be largely unnecessary.<sup>3</sup>

7 As noted above, the Special Master's scheduling order required that 8 the United States produce responsive documents in batches of 25,000 and 9 also produce privilege logs ten days after each production. In response 10 to the United States' request for clarification on this point, the 11 Special Master explained that "[s]imply put, the total number of 12 documents for each production should be the sum of all documents 13 actually produced, all documents listed on the corresponding privilege 14 log, and all documents processed, reviewed and found to be non-15 responsive to any request." (Report of Special Master at 7).

17 This clarification did not, as the United States argues, require 18 the United States to produce a privilege log identifying documents 19 generated after April 1, 2002, that were already exempted from 20 production under the CMO. The Special Master's order addressed three 21 categories of documents: produced documents, nonresponsive documents 22 and documents subject to logging for privilege under the CMO (i.e., 23 documents generated before April 1, 2002 or documents generated after 24

25 <sup>3</sup> Indeed, in some ways, this provision seems to rely on the 26 principle of "mutually assured destruction." Once a party invoked 27 paragraph 6(j) and requested a privilege log with respect to the post-28 April 1, 2002 documents, counsel explained at the hearing, the other party would likely file a matching request, forcing both to expend a much larger amount of time and money on document production.

1 April 1, 2002 for which no applicable privilege is claimed). The order 2 did not address a fourth category of documents: documents that are not 3 subject to logging for privilege under the CMO (i.e., documents 4 generated after April 1, 2002 for which certain privileges, as described 5 in the CMO, are claimed).

7 The Special Master's order required the United States to produce 8 25,000 documents in each stage of production, but was not required to 9 include documents that the CMO specifically exempted. In order to 10 obtain a privilege log describing such documents, Goodrich or any other 11 party must still make a further inquiry as contemplated by paragraph 12 6(j) of the CMO. (See CMO at 6-7). If the party deems it necessary, 13 it may then file a motion to compel their production before the Special 14 Master. (See id.).

16 Accordingly, because the Special Master's order did not require the 17 United States to produce a privilege log with respect to the privileged 18 post-April 1, 2002 documents, it did not conflict with the CMO.

19 20 C. The United States Has Failed To Demonstrate That The Scheduling
21 Order Is Unduly Burdensome

23 Finally, in the Motion for Review, as it did in its motion to the 24 Special Master for reconsideration of the scheduling order, the United 25 States complains that the schedule for production is "overly 26 burdensome." (See Report of Special Master at 9, Motion for Review at 27 13-16). The United States has failed to satisfy this Court that the 28 schedule is unduly burdensome.

1 While the Court, like the Special Master, recognizes that there is 2 a certain degree of burden placed upon the United States in responding 3 to Goodrich's requests for production, the Court must balance the burden 4 of an aggressive production schedule on the United States versus the 5 prejudice of a slower production schedule on Goodrich and the other 6 defendants in this case, who are subject to a discovery cut-off date of 7 February 29, 2012. (See CMO at 7). In addition to requiring time to 8 analyze the produced documents and privilege logs to determine whether 9 to file requests for or motions to compel additional documents, the 10 defendants must receive relevant documents in time to prepare for and 11 conduct depositions. Notably, the United States has objected to 12 proceeding with depositions before the completion of document
13 production. (See Motion for Review at 9).

14
15 Moreover, the Special Master already granted the United States a 16 modification of the document production schedule. The modified schedule 17 required the United States to produce 25,000 documents on March 24, 18 2011; 25,000 documents on April 8, 2011; 30,000 documents on April 25, 19 2011; and all remaining responsive documents on May 9, 2011. (Report 20 of Special Master at 10-11). At the May 31, 2011 hearing, counsel for 21 the United States conceded that the United States has complied with this 22 document production schedule. The United States' remaining objection 23 is to the production of corresponding privilege logs, which the 24 scheduling order and CMO require to be produced within ten days of each 25 document production.

26
27 The United States has failed to present persuasive evidence that 28 it could not meet the schedule for production of the privilege logs.

1 In the Motion for Review, the United States sets forth an array of 2 arguments as to why it would be overly burdensome to require the United 3 States to produce the privilege logs according to schedule. (See Motion 4 for Review at 13-15). These arguments lack evidentiary support, 5 however, and are undermined by the fact that the United States has 6 already produced all responsive documents, i.e., it appears that the 7 United States has at least reviewed all responsive documents for 8 privilege concerns.

10 Objections that discovery is overly burdensome generally fail 11 unless the objecting party supports the burdensomeness contention with 12 adequate declarations or affidavits. See, e.g., A. Farber & Ptnrs., 13 Inc., v. Garber, 234 F.R.D. 186, 188 (C.D. Cal. 2006). Here, the United 14 States attached the declarations of Valerie Mann and Danny Hambrick II
15 to the Motion for Review. (Motion for Review, Tab 4 at 14-17, 166-69).<sup>4</sup> 16 The Mann and Hambrick declarations describe the steps required to 17 process documents electronically, as well as the manpower which the 18 United States devoted to the production effort. However, neither 19 declaration states that it would be impossible to meet the deadlines 20 imposed by the Special Master, particularly as those deadlines pertained 21 to the production of privilege logs. These declarations do not show 22 that the schedule was unduly burdensome. Accordingly, the Court 23 declines to afford relief from the Special Master's schedule.

CONCLUSION

The United States' Motion for Review of the Special Master's order, to the extent that it objects to the order and requests that it be vacated, is DENIED. To the extent that the Motion for Review requests relief from the schedule set forth in the Special Master's order, it is also DENIED.

If Goodrich now intends to invoke paragraph 6(j) and formally request the United States to provide a privilege log for the post-April 1, 2002 documents, it shall notify the United States forthwith. (See CMO at 6-7). The United States shall respond to that request within a reasonable amount of time, and the parties shall meet and confer on the issue. If no agreement can be reached, the issue shall be presented to the Special Master. (See id. at 7, ¶ 7).

IT IS SO ORDERED.
